This act escalated tensions between the colonies and Britain, leading to the American Revolution.

Solution: The British East India Company was a British trading corporation established in 1600 to carry out trade with the East Indies. The company played a crucial role in the colonization of India, controlling the trade in goods such as spices, cotton, and tea. (1) In the pre-renaissance period the Catholic Church controlled the individual life of the people.

Solution: Explanation: During the pre-Renaissance period, the Catholic Church had significant influence over the lives of people in Europe. The Church controlled not only religious aspects of life but also social, political, and educational systems. It was the primary authority that dictated moral and ethical standards, and even political leaders were often answerable to the Church. The Church's control extended to matters like marriage, education, and burial. (3) Impact of World Wars on India were severe.

Solution: Explanation: Both World Wars had a severe impact on India, which played a crucial role in the war efforts but bore significant consequences. During World War I, India contributed troops and resources, but the British failed to offer any substantial political concessions, leading to widespread discontent and the emergence of nationalistic movements. World War II had an even more profound effect, with India once again contributing vast resources. The economic strain of the war led to a famine, and the failure of the British to grant independence despite these sacrifices intensified calls for freedom. The aftermath of both wars accelerated the demand for independence and further destabilized British rule in India.

(4) After the Second World War, the independence movements in Africa intensified.

Solution: Explanation: After the Second World War, the independence movements in Africa gained momentum. The war weakened European powers, both economically and politically, making it difficult for them to maintain their colonies. The war also led to a shift in global power dynamics, with the United States and the Soviet Union emerging as superpowers. These changes, coupled with growing nationalist sentiments, led to the rise of independence movements in Africa. Leaders like Kwame Nkrumah in Ghana, Jomo Kenyatta in Kenya, and others pushed for the end of colonial rule. International pressure, especially from the United Nations, also supported decolonization efforts.

(5) Cold War began.

Solution: Explanation: The Cold War began after the Second World War, primarily between the two emerging superpowers: the United States and the Soviet Union. The ideological differences between the capitalist West (led by the US) and the communist East (led by the Soviet Union) led to a global political and military rivalry. The Cold War was marked by an arms race, nuclear weapons buildup, and proxy wars, but direct military conflict between the US and USSR was avoided. The world became divided into two blocs: the Western bloc, led by the US, and the Eastern bloc, led by the Soviet Union. The Cold War had a profound impact on global politics for nearly half a century, shaping international relations and leading to events like the Cuban Missile Crisis, the Vietnam War, and the eventual collapse of the Soviet Union.

Q. 5. State your opinion (Any THREE):

(1) European colonialism led to economic exploitation of India.

Solution: Opinion: European colonialism, especially by the British, led to the economic exploitation of India. The British extracted resources, raw materials, and wealth from India, leaving the country impoverished. They established a colonial economy that prioritized British interests, such as manufacturing goods for export, rather than developing the Indian economy for the benefit of the local population. The British also imposed heavy taxes, which further impoverished the common people, and destroyed local industries, such as textiles. This exploitation is one of the key reasons for India's underdevelopment during the colonial period.

(2) The French helped to increase the military strength of the Marathas.

Solution: Opinion: The French played a significant role in increasing the military strength of the Marathas, especially during the 18th century. The French, under the leadership of leaders like Dupleix, provided military support, training, and artillery to the Maratha forces. The French military expertise helped the Marathas become a formidable force in the Deccan and beyond. The Maratha-French alliance also led to the creation of the Maratha Navy, which played a crucial role in regional conflicts. However, with the eventual defeat of the French in India, the Marathas were left to fend for themselves, but their military strength had already been boosted by the French.

(3) Mahatma Jyotirao Phule was the first social reformer of Maharashtra.

Solution: Opinion: Mahatma Jyotirao Phule was indeed one of the first prominent social reformers in Maharashtra, and perhaps in all of India. He challenged the deeply ingrained caste system and fought against the oppression of lower castes, especially the Dalits. Phule also made significant contributions to women's rights, particularly by founding the first school for girls in Pune. His efforts in social reform laid the foundation for movements like the Dalit Panthers in the 20th century. Phule's radical ideas and commitment to justice made him a pioneering figure in India's social reform movement.

(4) The credit of decolonisation can be attributed to the United Nations Organisation (UNO).

Solution: Opinion: While the United Nations Organization (UNO) played an important role in the post-World War II period in promoting decolonisation, the credit for decolonisation cannot solely be attributed to it. Decolonisation was largely driven by nationalist movements within colonized countries, which demanded independence from imperial powers. After WWII, the UNO helped facilitate the process through resolutions supporting self-determination and independence. However, it was the active resistance by colonized peoples, combined with shifting global dynamics and pressures on European powers, that led to the independence of many nations. The UNO merely provided a platform for the discussion and validation of these movements.

(5) The work done by Bhau Katdare in Konkan is significant.

Solution: Opinion: Bhau Katdare was a social reformer from the Konkan region, who worked towards the upliftment of the marginalized sections of society, especially the lower castes. His efforts in Konkan were focused on improving the social and economic conditions of the Dalits and other oppressed communities. Bhau Katdare's advocacy for education, his fight against untouchability, and his support for the betterment of the rural population made him an influential figure in Maharashtra's social reform movement. His work has had a lasting impact on the Konkan region and contributed to the wider social change in the state.

Quick Tip

The contributions of social reformers like Jyotirao Phule and Bhau Katdare were instrumental in laying the foundation for India's social justice movements, which continue to inspire reform even today.

Q. 6. Answer the following questions in detail (Any TWO):

(1) Write in detail the nature and impact of Economic Nationalism.

Solution: Explanation: Economic Nationalism refers to the idea that a country should protect and promote its own economy, often at the expense of global economic integration. It was particularly significant during the colonial period when countries like India and China faced economic exploitation by colonial powers. Economic Nationalism in India was closely linked to the struggle for independence and was promoted by leaders like Dadabhai Naoroji and Gopal Krishna Gokhale. They emphasized the need for self-reliance in manufacturing and agriculture, rather than relying on imported goods.

Nature: Economic Nationalism advocates for economic policies that prioritize national interests. These include measures like tariffs on foreign goods, state control over critical industries, and land reforms to benefit the indigenous population. It also involves boycotting foreign products to promote domestic manufacturing, as seen in the Swadeshi Movement led by Gandhi during the Indian Independence Movement.

Impact: The impact of Economic Nationalism in India was profound. It encouraged the growth of Indian industries and reduced dependence on British imports. The Swadeshi

Movement, which aimed at boycotting British goods, led to the establishment of several Indian-owned industries. It also contributed to a sense of national pride and self-sufficiency, which was a key element of India's independence struggle.

(2) Write in detail about the revolt of Umaji Naik.

Solution: Explanation: The revolt of Umaji Naik took place in 1827 in the Western Ghats, particularly in the areas of present-day Maharashtra. Umaji Naik was a leader who led a rebellion against the British East India Company's rule and the Maratha Peshwas who were under the British influence. The revolt arose due to the oppressive policies of the British, including high taxes, forced labor, and unfair land revenue policies that affected the peasants and tribals.

Umaji Naik was initially an ally of the British, but he became disillusioned after the British administration failed to honor their promises to him and his followers. He began his rebellion with a small group of followers, but it soon grew as he attracted support from various sections of society, especially the peasants and tribals who were suffering under British rule.

Impact: The revolt was initially successful, as Umaji Naik was able to organize an army and wage attacks on British installations. However, due to lack of resources and effective military strategies, the revolt was suppressed by the British within a short period. Despite its failure, the revolt of Umaji Naik is considered one of the early expressions of resistance against British rule, especially by marginalized communities in rural areas.

(3) Explain the policy of Government of India regarding health.

Solution: Explanation: The Government of India has always placed a strong emphasis on the health of its citizens, and several policies have been introduced to improve the overall health standards in the country. The primary focus of India's health policies has been to address issues like malnutrition, maternal and child health, sanitation, and the prevention and control of infectious diseases.

National Health Policy (NHP): The National Health Policy (NHP) of India was first formulated in 1983, with an aim to provide universal access to healthcare services. The NHP aims to reduce the disparities in health service delivery and increase healthcare access in rural and remote areas. The 2002 version of the policy focused on increasing the private sector's involvement in healthcare and establishing more efficient healthcare delivery systems.

Recent Developments: India's health policy has also evolved with the introduction of the National Rural Health Mission (NRHM) in 2005, which aimed to improve healthcare infrastructure in rural areas, and the Ayushman Bharat scheme in 2018, aimed at providing health insurance coverage for vulnerable families. These initiatives have improved access to healthcare services, reduced health disparities, and focused on creating an efficient healthcare system.

Impact: These policies have significantly reduced mortality rates, increased life expectancy, and improved health outcomes. However, challenges remain, such as the high burden of non-communicable diseases, shortage of healthcare professionals, and inadequate funding for the public health system.

Quick Tip
India's National Health Policy aims to make healthcare accessible, affordable, and effective for all sections of society, with a particular focus on vulnerable and underserved populations.

Q. 7. Answer the following questions with the help of given points (Any THREE):

(1) Discuss England's policy of colonialism in Asia - (a) Nepal

Solution: England's policy towards Nepal was influenced by its strategic interests in the region, particularly its rivalry with China and the British desire to control the Indian subcontinent. Although Nepal was never formally colonized by the British, it was under British influence after the Anglo-Nepalese War (1814-1816). The Sugauli Treaty (1815) forced Nepal to cede significant territories to the British. The British maintained control over Nepal's foreign relations and military, leading to the establishment of a subsidiary alliance system.

(b) Sikkim

Solution: Sikkim was another region where England applied a policy of indirect control. In the early 19th century, Sikkim was a small kingdom situated between India and Tibet. In 1817, the British East India Company established a protectorate over Sikkim. The Treaty of Titalia (1817) formalized British control over Sikkim's foreign affairs, making the kingdom subordinate to British interests. This relationship continued until Sikkim became a part of India in 1947 after the end of British colonial rule.

(c) Bhutan

Solution: Bhutan's relationship with British colonialism was shaped by its location between British India and Tibet. The British first intervened in Bhutan's affairs in the early 19th century due to concerns over trade routes and strategic interests. Following the Bhutan War (1864-1865), the British forced Bhutan to cede some territories and accept British suzerainty. Bhutan remained an autonomous kingdom under British influence until India's independence in 1947, after which Bhutan became an independent kingdom with close relations to India.

Quick Tip

The British employed various strategies to control neighboring regions like Nepal, Sikkim, and Bhutan, balancing between direct colonial rule and indirect influence through protectorates and treaties.

Q. 2 Explain the Anglo-Maratha wars in detail –

(a) First Anglo-Maratha War (1775-1782):

Solution: Explanation: The First Anglo-Maratha War began as a result of the Maratha Empire's attempt to restore the rightful ruler, Madhavrao II, after his exile. The conflict was initiated by the British East India Company, who supported the Maratha dissidents under Mahadji Shinde. The Marathas sought to resist the increasing influence of the British in India. The war ended with the Treaty of Salbai in 1782, which restored the status quo, with the Marathas gaining some territories back, and the British agreeing to leave Maratha territories intact. However, the war demonstrated the growing influence of the British and the weakening of the Maratha Confederacy.

(b) Second Anglo-Maratha War (1803-1805):

Solution: Explanation: The Second Anglo-Maratha War was triggered by internal disputes among the Maratha factions, especially after the death of the Peshwa Baji Rao II. The British, under the leadership of Lord Wellesley, intervened in the conflict and sided with one faction of the Marathas against the others. The war was marked by several significant battles, including the Battle of Assaye, where the British defeated the Maratha forces. The war ended with the Treaty of Bassein (1802), which resulted in the Marathas being forced to accept British control over their internal and external affairs, and much of their territory being ceded to the British.

(c) Third Anglo-Maratha War (1817-1818):

Solution: Explanation: The Third Anglo-Maratha War was the final and decisive conflict between the British East India Company and the Maratha Empire. After the Marathas attempted to resist British influence in India and sought to restore their power, the British declared war. The conflict saw a series of battles, culminating in the Battle of Koregaon, where the British decisively defeated the Marathas. The Peshwa, Baji Rao II, was defeated and exiled to Bithoor. The Maratha Empire effectively ceased to exist, and the British became the undisputed rulers of most of India, marking the end of Maratha power and the establishment of British hegemony.

Quick Tip

The Anglo-Maratha Wars were crucial in shaping the future of British India. After the Third Anglo-Maratha War, the Marathas were significantly weakened, and the British East India Company consolidated control over India.

Q. 3 Explain the factors responsible for the Second World War –

(a) The Treaty of Versailles

Solution: Explanation: The Treaty of Versailles, signed in 1919, officially ended World War I but created many conditions that contributed to the outbreak of the Second World War.

The treaty placed full blame for the war on Germany and imposed severe reparations and territorial losses on the country. The harsh terms of the treaty caused significant resentment in Germany, which led to widespread economic hardship and political instability. This discontent provided fertile ground for extremist ideologies, such as fascism and Nazism, to take root. The punitive measures in the treaty were one of the key factors that paved the way for the rise of Adolf Hitler and his aggressive expansionist policies, which ultimately led to the outbreak of World War II.

(b) Fascism and Nazism

Solution: Explanation: Fascism, particularly in Italy under Benito Mussolini, and Nazism, under Adolf Hitler in Germany, were key ideologies that directly contributed to the outbreak of the Second World War. Fascist regimes, built on authoritarian rule, extreme nationalism, and militarism, sought territorial expansion and the establishment of totalitarian states. Hitler's Nazi regime, in particular, had expansionist ambitions, seeking to establish a Greater Germany and dominate Europe. The aggression displayed by fascist states in Europe, including the invasion of neighboring countries and the establishment of oppressive regimes, led to the breakdown of international peace and security, contributing directly to the outbreak of war in 1939.

(c) Failure of League of Nations Organisation

Solution: Explanation: The League of Nations, established after World War I with the aim of maintaining peace and preventing future conflicts, failed to prevent the outbreak of the Second World War. The League lacked the authority and military power to enforce its decisions and relied on collective security, which proved ineffective. Several major powers, including the United States, did not join the League, weakening its ability to act decisively. Additionally, the League failed to prevent the aggressive actions of fascist powers, such as Italy's invasion of Ethiopia and Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland. The League's inability to curb these acts of aggression led to the erosion of international trust in its ability to maintain peace, directly contributing to the outbreak of World War II.

Quick Tip

The Treaty of Versailles, along with the rise of fascism and the failure of the League of Nations, created an environment where conflict was inevitable, leading to the outbreak of the Second World War.

Q. 4 Write about Non-Alignment Movement –

(a) Nature of Non-Alignment Movement

Solution: Explanation: The Non-Alignment Movement (NAM) was a political and diplomatic initiative founded in 1961 with the goal of promoting peace, sovereignty, and independence among developing nations, particularly those emerging from colonial rule. The nature of the movement was to resist the pressures of taking sides in the ideological and military conflicts of the Cold War. It emphasized mutual respect, territorial integrity, peaceful coexistence, and non-intervention in the internal affairs of other nations. The movement sought to provide a third way for countries that did not wish to be dominated by either of the two superpowers.

This does not mean isolation but promoting peaceful coexistence and cooperation. 3. Mutual Respect: Respect for the territorial integrity and sovereignty of other nations, avoiding intervention in the domestic affairs of sovereign states. 4. Peaceful Coexistence: Support for peace and harmony among nations, promoting the resolution of conflicts through peaceful dialogue rather than violence. 5. Economic Cooperation: Emphasizing the need for economic development and collaboration among developing countries to achieve mutual growth and prosperity.

(c) Belgrade Conference

Solution: Explanation: The Belgrade Conference was held in 1961 in Yugoslavia and marked the first official conference of the Non-Alignment Movement. The conference brought together representatives from 25 countries, including key leaders such as Jawaharlal Nehru (India), Gamal Abdel Nasser (Egypt), and Josip Broz Tito (Yugoslavia). The conference focused on advocating for the promotion of world peace, independence, and solidarity among developing countries. The main aim was to avoid military and political alignment with either the US or the Soviet Union during the Cold War. The Belgrade Conference also laid the foundations for the movement's principles and strategy, emphasizing neutrality, non-interference, and collective action for global peace.

Quick Tip

The Non-Alignment Movement was significant during the Cold War as it gave smaller and newly independent nations a platform to assert their independence and push for peaceful coexistence.
