Stammering is a habit disorder linked with lack of self confidence. Basically for a child to understand a language, there are four stages. The first is learning to understand the spoken language and the second is speaking. Both of these develop around age of two years.

The third stage is speaking complex sentences, which develops at around 3rd and 4th i.e. when the child recognizes the written alphabet. In 80% of children while the 3rd & 4th stage are at play, the first two get disturbed as something new is being incorporated in the mind.

This is absolutely normal. But what over cautious mothers do is fret a lot and the child develops fear which later manifests itself as stammering. Street theatre in India is a well established ancient art form. Despite the proliferation of modern means of entertainment and communication, street theatre continues to flourish in India. Street theatre as a channel of communication has for centuries been propagating reforms by highlighting social, economic and political issues present in the society. Unlike in the olden days, its performance is no longer restricted to villages or small localities of the city. Today small group of performers including students would stage performances to mobilize public opinion or to help create or raise awareness over an issue of particular public importance.

Themes on substance abuse, AIDS awareness and domestic violence are some of the areas highlighted by contemporary street theatre. Unlike in regular drama, street dramas employ very little props and images. The human body become the main tool in which choreography, mime, dialogues, songs and slogans are extensively used.

Street theatre is one of the most intimate media. Its appeal is to the emotions leading to quick psychological impact on audiences. By being local and live they also are able to establish not only direct contact with audience, but being cost effective and flexible they are popular among all age groups.

One simple physical contact lies behind the formation of a star, gravitational instability. The concept is not new. Newton first perceived it late in the 17th century.

Imagine a uniform, static cloud of gas in space. Imagine then that the gas is somehow disturbed so that one small spherical region becomes a little denser than the gas around it so that the small region's gravitational field becomes slightly stronger. It now attracts more matter to it and its gravity increases further, causing it to begin to contract. As it contracts its density increases which increases the gravity even more, so that it picks up even more matter and contracts even further. The process continues until the small region of gas finally forms a gravitationally bound object.

The capitalist system of the society does not foster healthy relations among human beings. A few people own all the means of production and others though nominally few have to sell their labour under conditions imposed upon them, the emphasis of capitalism being on the supreme importance of material wealth. The intensity of its appeal is to the acquisitive intensity. It promotes worship of economic power with little regard to the means employed for its acquisition and the end that it serves. By its exploitation of human beings to the limits of endurance, its concentration is on the largest profit rather than maximum production.

Thus division of human family is done on the basis of economic circumstances. All this is injurious to division of human dignity. And when the harrowed Poor turn to the founders of religion for succor, they rather offer a subtle defence of the established order. They promise future happiness for their present suffering and conjure up vision of paradise to redress the balance to soothe the suffering and the revolt of the tortured man. The system imposes injustice, religion justifies it.
